

Diana documentary comes to Seven

Featuring extensive interviews from Prince William and Prince Harry on the 20th anniversary of their beloved mother's death

(22 Jun 2016) Channel 7 are set to air a landmark documentary on Lady Diana Spencer, Princess of Wales celebrating her life and work.

The as yet untitled film will be built around extensive interviews with the two people who knew her best; The Duke of Cambridge, Prince William and Prince Harry.

Focusing on her philanthropic and humanitarian work, the young Royals will also reflect on her legacy and the influence she had on their lives.

Seven's Director of Network Programming, Angus Ross, said: "We feel privileged to bring this story to Australian audiences. This exceptionally insightful film on one of the most iconic figures of our generation, will pay homage to a remarkable woman and those who loved her."

Also included will be personal anecdotes and reflections from family and friends, some of whom have never spoken publicly.

With international broadcasters including HBO and ITV, the documentary comes from British production company Oxford Film and Television and is coming soon, exclusively to Seven.
