New series to reveal the truth behind celebrity deaths

The truth behind the controversial deaths of Michael Jackson, Whitney Houston and Anna Nicole Smith is revealed in Seven's upcoming documentary series, AUTOPSY: THE LAST HOURS OF...

The sudden and tragic passing of global mega-stars Michael Jackson, Whitney Houston and Anna Nicole Smith sent the world into a frenzy fuelled by hearsay and rumour. Now, three documentaries investigate their extraordinary lives and untimely deaths to finally put an end to the speculation.

Coming soon to Seven, AUTOPSY: THE LAST HOURS OF... uses crucial medical evidence gained from the actual autopsies to explain what killed the stars and how they died. Interviews with friends and family shed light on the decisions that set them on the path towards their deaths.

The series features world renowned forensic pathologist, Dr Richard Shepherd, who has been performing high profile autopsies for more than 25 years. His expertise has been called on for the aftermath of the September 11 and Bali Bombing attacks, the inquest into the death of Princess Diana and the Bloody Sunday Inquiry.

Through analysis of their autopsies, Dr Shepherd reconstructs the final days of these three global icons.
